THE OATH

I Swear

by Apollo the physician, and Aesculapius, & Health, & All-heal, & all the gods & goddesses, that according to my ability & judgement,

I Will Keep This Oath

& this stipulation to reckon him who taught me this Art equally dear to me as my parents, to share my substance with him, & relieve his necessities if required; to look upon his offspring in the same footing as my own brothers, & to teach them this Art, if they shall wish to learn it,

Without Fee Or Stipulation

& that by precept, lecture, & every other mode of instruction, I will impart a knowledge of the Art to my own sons, & those of my teachers, & to disciples bound by a stipulation & oath

According To The Law Of Medicine

but to none others. I will follow the system of regimen which according to my ability & judgement, I consider

For The Benefit Of My Patients

& abstain from whatever is deleterious & mischievous. I will give no deadly medicine to any one if asked, nor suggest any such counsel; & in like manner I will not give to a woman a pessary to produce abortion.

With Purity And With Holiness I Will

Pass My Life And Practice My Art

I will not cut persons laboring under the stone, but will leave this to be done by men who are practitioners of this work. Into whatever houses I enter, I will go into them for the benefit of the sick, & will abstain from every voluntary act of mischief & corruption;

And Further

from the seduction of females or males, of freemen & slaves. Whatever in connection with my professional practice or not in connection with it, I see or hear, in the life of men, which ought not to be spoken of abroad,

I Will Not Divulge

as reckoning that all such should be kept secret. While I continue to keep this Oath unviolated, may it be granted to me to enjoy life & the practice of the Art respected by all men in all times!

But should I trespass & violate this Oath, may the reverse be my lot!

DEDICATION

M. Elizabeth Huston, M.S.

Few have given more to Woman's Medical College than M. Elizabeth Huston. A vital and sincere loyalty to the College has prompted her fifteen years of dedicated efficiency in the performance of innumerable duties as the Administrative Assistant to the Dean. Miss Huston's unique amalgamation of understanding, good will, and humor have allowed her to be both a just critic and a helpful counselor to those students who have come to her for advice. To one who extended to us the initial welcome to the College we give this last salute in fond appreciation for her efforts in our behalf and for the College — M. ELIZABETH HUSTON

"... probably useful only in the treatment of Addison's disease."

No knowledgeable person could have predicted more for cortisone. The time was April, 1948. The conclusion by a panel of distinguished clinicians that this medical new-comer, the first of the corticosteroids, would probably be of value only against one rare disease reflected the best in scientific thinking. No one could have foreseen that in the coming decade and a half, the corticosteroids would be utilized against more than 50 diseases and disorders, and that millions of persons would benefit each year.

Merck & Co., which pioneered with cortisone, could trace its interest in the marvelous secretions from the adrenal cortex back to 1933, when it had cooperated in studies at Johns Hopkins School of Medicine. World War II gave the studies urgency when it was reported—falsely, as it turned out—that German aviators were making use of an adrenal extract to fly as high as 40,000 feet without oxygen.

The federal government had lost interest by 1944, but Merck continued to push ahead with the adrenal program, cooperating closely in this work with Dr. Edward C. Kendall and his colleagues at the Mayo Clinic. It was Dr. Kendall who had first worked out the formulas for the corticosteroids. The first laboratory synthesis of cortisone, a mile-stone in medicinal chemistry, was accomplished by a brilliant young Merck scientist, Dr. Lewis H. Sarett, in December, 1944.

It was in September, 1948, five months after the clinicians had issued their evaluation, that Dr. Philip S. Hench, also of the Mayo Clinic, made medical history with a series of cortisone injections given to a 29-year-old arthritic woman. The patient, who had been bedfast and virtually unable to move, delightedly went shopping after one week of therapy. A new era in medicine had been born.

Within the research laboratories of Merck Sharp & Dohme, which came into existence through the merger of Merck with Sharp & Dohme in 1953, the quest for a better anti-inflammatory agent has never ceased. In these laboratories, scientists probe deeply into the basic nature of inflammatory disease. Chemists synthesize and study a wide variety of corticosteroids; pharmacologists, physiologists and physicians check these and other compounds to see how they measure up in activity and absence of unwanted side effects.

Merck Sharp & Dohme's research and development in the corticosteroid field is but one of the company's many programs of scientific investigation. The medical scientists engaged in this work are the trustees of the better medicines of tomorrow, which are now being created in their test tubes and minds.

We would like to thank the college, our teachers, families, and the many friends who have made it possible for us to become physicians.
